Your bill of fare; but, for that matter, The world will not believe the latter. Well, leave the world in unbelief. Still, science, trifles, fancies light as air, I hold, should mingle in a bill of fare, Each giving each its due relief; As, where the gifts of Flora fall, On different flowers we see Alight the busy bee, Educing sweet from all. Thus much premised, dont think it strange, Or aught beyond my muses range, If een my fables should infold, Among their nameless trumpery, The traits of a philosophy Far-famed as subtle, charming, bold. They call it new--the men of wit; Perhaps you have not heard of it. My verse will tell you what it means: --They say that beasts are mere machines; Madam de la Sabliere was one of the most learned women of the age in which she lived, and knew more of the philosophy of Descartes, in which she was a believer, than our poet; but she dreaded the reputation of a Blue-stocking, and for this reason La Fontaine addresses her as if she might be ignorant of the Cartesian theory. That, in their doings, every thing Is done by virtue of a spring--No sense, nor soul, nor notion, But matter merely--set in motion;--Just such the watch in kind, Which joggeth on, to purpose blind. Now ope, and read within its breast--The place of soul is by its wheels possessed One moves a second, that a third, Till finally...
