Teamsters and barbers are numerous. Two hundred and ninety-two seamen were listed in April, 1911, as living in the North End. Probably many more are frequent, perhaps regular, visitors to the boarding-houses for considerable periods. Indications are strong that seamen are as numerous in the North End as at any time within the past few years. While the boarding-house element is large, family life abounds, very largely the effect of Jewish population (which is waning) and of the Italian (which is increasing). The families average five persons. They range all the way from one to forty-four persons. But more than twenty thousand persons live in families of from three to ten persons each. The importance of these facts may be illustrated from the personal observation that at the Italian services attended the congregation showed the presence of considerable portions of given...
