It takes a man or a woman of iron nerve, as well as of athletic instinct, to undertake a task of this kind, and it is not surprising that the majority prefer to inspect from above, although it can easily be understood that by so doing they rob themselves of a great deal of pleasure as well as enlightenment. It must not be presumed that for the entire length of more than two hundred miles the Rio Colorado runs between granite walls and one continuous precipice. The Canon is as varying as it is enormous. Here there is what may be termed a gash in the earth, with perpendicular walls on both sides of the river, marvelously symmetrical and almost mathematically parallel; there the rise is less abrupt, forests of trees and mountains of no inconsiderable size finding a resting...
